The procession was headed by the Committee, followed by a brass band, and then a banner of humble pretensions, with the inscription, "Representatives of the distress in Poplar." Other banners were displayed bearing the mottoes, "Time and strength are waiting"; "Work is our want—our shipwards are empty"; and "Unity and freedom brings peace and plenty." The best possible order prevailed among the procession, which, by the time it reached Whitechapel, numbered between 4,000 and 5,000. The route taken was along the East India Roud, Commercial Road, Whitechapel, Leadenhall street, and by the Mansion House, it passing which the progress was very slow. Turning into Moorgate street they proceeded to Finsbury Square, and thence into Barbican, making their way to Farringdon atreet. On passing up Fiset street and the Strand, the quielness of the destitute men attracted much strention afterwards to march through Pall Mall, St. James street. Piocadilly, Park Lane, Oxford street, Holborn, and then homeward. While the procession was moving, men were walking on either side of the pavement carrying a box, which served as a receptable for such assistance as the passers-by were disposed to give to alleviate the distressed condition of the men and their families.

SUSPECTED PENIANTSM IN THE WEST OF

In our impression of Tuesday, says the Scotsman of April 5th, we reported that a body of Fenions had been discovered drilling on the turnpike road, at Coatbridge, by Sergeant McNaughton and two constables, who put the troops to flight, and succeeded in capturing six of them. The officers, doubting their authority to take the men into custody, contented themselves with taking a note of their names, and reporting the circumstances to the authorites at Air drie. A special warrant, charging the six man with illeval drilling, under the Act 60

Ocorge III. was issued on Friday, and placed in the hands of Captain Thomas Clark, when that officer proceeded to Mossend, where two of the suspected men were apprehended. They gave their names as Hugh Murphy and John Brogan, both puddlers, residing at Mossend. A third person was apprehended, and identified by constable Urquishart, during the day. He gave his name as Thomas O'llare, a laborer, residing at Unitank, and in the employment of the Mossend Ion Company. The three men were conveyed to Airdrie under an escort of police. On marching to the railway station they were followed by a considerable crowd. The apprehension of these men has caused great excitement at Mossend, and fifteen men, suspected of being connected with the alleged drilling, are reported to have field during the week. A correspondent in the district writes:—"A suspicion that many Fenians, or sympathisers with the Fonian army, are located in the neighborhood-which is, and always has been, a 'cenest' for the 'brotherhood'—much uneasiness is everywhere felt by the respectable portion of the inhabitants, who are kept in a state of unusual activity and alarm. Every train that arrives from the west brings with it mysterious looking characters to the various stations between Controlings and Wishaw.
